I appreciate the reply, but you failed to answer my question. Which indicates the EPA made a statement it can't back up, in fact, the statement was made prior to any assessment of environmental damage. I believe the term is "whitewashing."
That's shameful.

Regarding the EPA press release on the recent catastrophe in Silverton, CO, what precise factual evidence did the EPA use to inform its statement, "The agency said impacts on wildlife and the environment in the area would likely be minimal."?"

I would like an honest answer, if I don't get one, I'll assume you don't have one.

Thank you
